NUS law school signs student exchange agreement with Fudan University's law school

On 27 February 2003, the NUS and Fudan University law schools entered into a student exchange agreement. Under the terms of the agreement, each law school may send one student on exchange for a year, or two students for a semester each. The agreement was signed by Associate Professor Tan Cheng Han, Dean of the NUS law school, and Professor Li Chang Dao, Dean of the Fudan University law school. Also present at the signing ceremony were Associate Professor Li Mei Qin from NUS and from Fudan University were Associate Professor Lu Zhi-an, Deputy Director of the Foreign Affairs Office, Associate Research Fellow Sun Rui, the Party Secretary General and Vice-Dean Professor Dong Mao Yun. This is the third student exchange agreement with a top Chinese university entered into by the NUS Faculty of Law. The two previous agreements that were entered into in 2002 were with the East China University of Politics and Law and Peking University.

During their visit to Shanghai, the Dean and Associate Professor Li also visited the East China University of Politics and Law and the Shanghai Institute of Foreign Trade to discuss future collaboration. Interviews were also conducted for Chinese nationals from Shanghai and its surrounding areas who have applied for admission to the NUS Faculty of Law's graduate programmes.
