NEW LAW DEGREE AT NUS

THE National University of Singapore will launch a new concurrent degree in law and public policy next year. The degree combines the strengths of the Lee Kuan Yew School of Public Policy and the Faculty of Law. It aims to attract law students who are interested in careers in the legal, civil or foreign service.

Students will graduate with a bachelor of law degree, and a masters degree in public policy in five years, a year shorter than if they were to pursue both degrees separately. — 938LIVE