

PRESS RELEASE

---

15 February 2006

NYU@NUS: A GROUND-BREAKING LAW PROGRAMME FOR THE GLOBALLY-MINDED

New York University and National University of Singapore to Offer Dual Graduate Degree Programme in Singapore

In a move that will transform the very concept of global legal education, New York University School of Law (NYU) and the National University of Singapore Faculty of Law (NUS) have created a dual degree programme in Asia's commercial and legal hub, Singapore.

Entitled NYU@NUS, this programme will allow students from around the world to experience two educational universes, earning Master of Laws (LL.M.) degrees from both a leading U.S. institution and a leading Asian law school.

At least fifty scholarships will be offered in each of the first four years of the programme.

The new initiative reflects both law schools' commitment to the global study of law.

"For NYU School of Law this is a natural step," said Dean Richard L. Revesz. "Over a decade ago, we recognised that important changes in the way law was being practised required changes in the way it was taught. This led to the creation of our highly successful Hauser Global Law School Program. Our partnership with NUS takes that insight to the next level."

"The NUS and NYU law schools have similar goals of developing globally-oriented teaching programmes and research and it is therefore natural for both law schools to enter into this exciting and innovative collaboration. We are delighted to welcome the NYU School of Law to Singapore; not only is it a leading U.S. law school, it enjoys a richly deserved reputation as one of the most visionary law schools in the United States," said Dean Tan Cheng Han S.C. of NUS. "At the same time, this is one of the many developments that are taking place at the NUS law school as we respond rigorously to the challenges posed by the greater pace of globalisation today."

The NYU degree that will be offered in Singapore will be called the LL.M. in Law and the Global Economy. If they wish, students will be able to focus their studies in either U.S. and Asian Business and Trade Law or specialise in Justice and Human Rights.

Students enrolled in the NYU@NUS programme may also read courses towards the NUS LL.M. degree and can choose to focus their studies on Asian Law, Commercial Law, Intellectual Property and Technology Law, or International Law.

NYU@NUS: A GROUND-BREAKING LAW PROGRAMME FOR THE GLOBALLY-MINDED

A distinct feature of the NYU degree is that, whilst taking place in Singapore, the degree will be taught predominantly by NYU Faculty in residence at NUS. It is also envisaged that in keeping with the global orientation of the NYU@NUS programme, there will be collaborative teaching between NYU and NUS Faculty. In addition to the academic programme — in all respects as rigorous as its counterpart in New York — students will be able to opt for internships with Singaporean and other Asia-based law firms, as well as governmental and non-governmental agencies. After graduating, they may also choose to spend a further two months in New York taking a special course in American Lawyering.

Congratulating the law schools on the launch of NYU@NUS, Mr Teo Ming Kian, Chairman of the Economic Development Board, said, “The entry of NYU@NUS into Singapore is in line with EDB’s vision for Singapore to offer a diverse and distinctive mix of educational services to the world — from leading foreign universities to corporate training universities and foreign specialised institutions, across different geographies and disciplines. The NYU@NUS programme is also expected to boost Singapore’s status as a Global Schoolhouse by attracting good students from around the world.”

“We expect the new program to attract two broad categories of applicants,” said Chair and Faculty Director of NYU’s Global Law School Program, Professor Joseph Weiler. “The first is Asian students who hope to acquire proficiency in American Law and benefit from the distinct methodology and style of American legal education, while also developing a comparative understanding of Asian Law. The second is students from the rest of the world who recognize the importance of Asia and want to combine the rigor of an American law degree whilst simultaneously acquiring proficiency in Asian law and institutions.”

John Sexton, NYU’s President and a former dean of the Law School, praised the initiative, “New York is the capital of the world, and NYU — which sends more students abroad than any other U.S. university and has among the largest group of international students in the U.S. on its campus — embraces that same sense of global connectedness and promise. This partnership will be an important new element of NYU’s global efforts.”

NUS President Shih Choon Fong applauded the move: “This is in line with NUS’ vision to build intelligent partnerships and cultivate a global community of scholars. The law school has been very active in facilitating this vision with its many global initiatives that include the establishment of the Asian Law Institute, international research collaborations, and student exchange agreements with other leading law schools. This partnership with NYU takes the law school’s vision of a global law school further. I am also especially pleased that the historic and beautiful Bukit Timah campus will host this exciting new LL.M. program.”

NYU will be represented in Singapore by Dr Simon Chesterman, who will direct the programme. “This relationship brings together one of the top international law faculties in the United States and Asia’s Global Law School,” said Dr Chesterman. “It’s tremendously exciting not only for the students but also for the two faculties.”

The first cohort of students will commence studies in May 2007.

---

Media inquiries in New York:
Professor Joseph H.H. Weiler
Tel: +1 212 992-8913
Email: joseph.weiler@nyu.edu

Professor Stephen Gillers
Tel: +1 212 998-6264
Email: stephen.gillers@nyu.edu

Media inquiries in Singapore:
Associate Professor Teo Keang Sood
Tel: +65 6516-4880
Email: lawteoks@nus.edu.sg

Ms Geraldine Lee
Tel: +65 6516-4280
Email: lawleey@nus.edu.sg

FURTHER INFORMATION

For information about the programme and admission details, please visit <http://www.nyulawglobal.org/singapore> or email nyu@nus.edu

For media inquiries in New York, contact:

Professor Joseph H.H. Weiler
Chair and Faculty Director, Hauser Global
Law School Program
New York University School of Law
Tel: +1 212 992-8913
Email: joseph.weiler@nyu.edu

Professor Stephen Gillers
Emily Kempin Professor of Law
New York University School of Law
Tel: +1 212 998-6264
Email: stephen.gillers@nyu.edu

For media inquiries in Singapore, contact:

Associate Professor Teo Keang Sood
Vice-Dean, Research and Graduate Studies
Faculty of Law
National University of Singapore
Tel: +65 6516-4880
Email: lawteoks@nus.edu.sg

Ms Geraldine Lee
Assistant Director
Faculty of Law
National University of Singapore
Tel: 6516 4280
Email: lawleey@nus.edu.sg

About New York University School of Law

The School of Law is one of the oldest law schools in the United States. It offers a comprehensive first professional programme leading to the degree of Juris Doctor and a graduate curriculum leading to the degrees of Masters of Laws and Doctor of Juridical Science. The law school is a leader in providing scholarships to promising students, recruiting top faculty, and improving tuition subsidies and loan forgiveness programmes. The School of Law regularly posts recent graduates to the U.S. Supreme Court for the highly-coveted clerkships. The Root-Tilden-Kern scholarship program produced more than 800 of the finest public service leaders in the country. Each year, some of the world's top foreign lawyers visit to teach at the Hauser Global Law School Program, founded in 1995. An extraordinarily wide-range of course offerings, research centres, colloquia, and special programmes are made available to students. Policy-makers and practitioners regularly converge on Washington Square South to explore critical issues in the law. For more information, please visit <http://www.law.nyu.edu>.

About the NUS Faculty of Law

The NUS Faculty of Law aims to be Asia's Global Law School and is dedicated to building a community in which faculty and students can discuss and reflect on fundamental legal issues that affect societies around the world. Staffed by faculty with law degrees from more than a dozen jurisdictions, the Faculty offers a broad and diverse range of subjects that provide students with a liberal law education. Apart from the main four-year LL.B programme for those with good A-level results or equivalent, the Faculty also offers a three-year Graduate LL.B programme for those with a good first degree, and several graduate and continuing legal education programmes. The Faculty is the sole law school in Singapore and has produced a vast array of prominent graduates occupying top positions in government, the judiciary, diplomacy, academia and the legal profession. The Faculty also produces research which is published in leading academic journals in and outside Singapore, and is served by the CJ Koh Law Library, one of the best law libraries in Asia and the common law world. For more information, please visit <http://law.nus.edu.sg>.

NYU@NUS

A Ground-Breaking Law Programme for the Globally-Minded

NYU@NUS: Introduction

- Dual graduate degree programme by New York University School of Law (NYU) and National University of Singapore Faculty of Law (NUS)
- Leading to Master of Laws (LL.M.) in Law and the Global Economy with options to specialise in U.S. and Asian Business and Trade Law, or Justice and Human Rights
- Leading to NUS LL.M. degree; specialising in Asian Law, Commercial Law, Intellectual Property and Technology Law, or International Law

NYU@NUS: Programme Overview

- Based in Singapore and taught predominantly by resident NYU and NUS faculty
- 10-month programme starting in May 2007
- Internship options with Singaporean and other Asia-based law firms, as well as governmental and non-governmental agencies
- Option to spend a further 2 months in New York after graduating, to take a special course in American Lawyering

NYU@NUS: Programme Overview

- Target initial enrollment – 80 students
- Applicants must satisfy the admission requirements of NYU and NUS
- Tuition fees expected to be the same as what NYU students in New York pay
- At least 50 scholarships to be offered in each of the first four years of the programme

NYU@NUS: Conclusion

- Brings together a leading U.S. law school and a leading Asian law school
- Globally-oriented, rigorous academic programme
- For the globally-minded who want to acquire proficiency in American law while developing a comparative understanding of Asian law OR who recognise the importance of Asia and want to combine the rigor of an American law degree whilst acquiring proficiency in Asian law and institutions