2 February 2011

Launch of Inaugural issue of Asian Journal of International Law

The Asian Journal of International Law is a twice-yearly publication of the Asian Society of International Law. It publishes peer-reviewed scholarly articles (8,000 to 12,000 words excluding footnotes) and book reviews (up to 1,000 words including footnotes) on public and private international law. The regional focus of the Journal is broadly conceived. Some articles may focus specifically on Asian issues; others will bring one of the many Asian perspectives to bear on issues of global concern. Still others will be of more general interest to scholars, practitioners, and policy-makers located in or working on Asia.

The Journal is published in English as a matter of practical convenience rather than political endorsement. English-language reviews of books in other languages are particularly welcomed. Abstracts of selected articles in other Asian languages will be posted on the Journal’s website.

The Journal is produced for the Asian Society of International Law by the National University of Singapore Faculty of Law and published by Cambridge University Press. For further information, visit www.AsianJIL.org.