In conjunction with the inaugural Asian Law and Society Association (ALSA) conference, the Asian Law Institute and the Centre for Asian Legal Studies at the National University of Singapore (NUS) are pleased to invite applications for the Young Scholars’ Workshop 2016. The workshop will be held on 21 September 2016, prior to the ALSA conference at NUS Law.

Eligibility: Doctoral students in the late stages of their education, research or post-doctoral fellows who completed their doctoral degrees no earlier than 2013, and faculty members in the first three years of their academic careers are eligible to apply (we do not accept applications from LL.M. or undergraduate students).

Priority will be given to faculty members and doctoral students from institutions that are ASLI members as of 1 March 2016.

The Workshop

The workshop will encourage scholars to mold their research and writing toward law-and-society topics relating to Asian societies, advance their knowledge and understanding of the field, and build an intellectual community. It will offer insights into key debates and analytical trends in the field; research methodologies; writing and publishing; and also a valuable opportunity to receive feedback on one’s research project and papers. The program will consist of seminars led by senior and emerging law and society scholars.

Application for the workshop will be competitive. Applicants trained in law, the social sciences, and other fields of study are welcome. Some financial support may be available for selected participants.

Selected participants will be asked to submit a paper or a chapter of their written work for presentation and discussion during the workshop. This paper may be presented at the ALSA conference as well.

To submit an application, please (Click Here)

Submission Closes on 31st March 2016