

Trade Finance for the 21st Century

8 & 9 March 2018, Thursday & Friday
Faculty of Law, National University of Singapore

Overview of the Symposium

The volume of international trade continues on a rising trajectory with global economic development and new trading relationships. Established tools of trade financing such as the documentary letter of credit and its related instruments must be re-examined. Advancements in technology have led to fresh opportunities, including the use of blockchain and the switch to electronic forms of documentation. Banks have devised new methods of financing, for instance, the bank payment obligation. This Symposium brings together international legal experts to address these and other developments that are vital to trade finance for the 21st century.

Convened by

Assoc Prof Dora Neo, National University of Singapore
Assoc Prof Christopher Hare, University of Oxford

Participation is by invitation only

For more information, please contact Ms Germaine
Tan at cbfl@nus.edu.sg

In collaboration with:

