About the Seminar
The regime of banking supervision in the Euro zone is undergoing substantial changes. For the first time, the systemically important banks will be supervised by a supranational organization, the European Central Bank. The speakers will introduce this new supervisory concept, called the Single Supervisory Mechanism (SSM), and refer to further related developments, e.g. the structure of the new Single Resolution Mechanism (SRM). They will discuss how competences will be shared among the European Central Bank, the European Banking Authority and the national authorities. Part of this will be a discussion about the economic rationale and political implications of these reforms and the main legal issues currently debated, e.g. the role of non-Euro/non-participating EU Member States and the accountability of the European Central Bank.
