

SINGAPORE YEAR BOOK OF INTERNATIONAL LAW
(Published by the Faculty of Law, National University of Singapore)

In 1977, the then long-established Malaya Law Review (now known as the Singapore Journal of Legal Studies) commenced a regular section with the aim of recording Singapore's growing state practice in international law. In 1997, in consideration of the fact that the international law articles and regular sections in the Singapore Journal of Legal Studies had become well-established, the Singapore Journal of International & Comparative Law was founded in its own right to focus on international law as well as comparative law, which had also come to feature regularly in the Singapore Journal of Legal Studies.

Beginning with Volume 8 of 2004, the Singapore Journal of International & Comparative Law is renamed the Singapore Year Book of International Law to reflect its exclusive attention to international law issues, and its status as an annual single-issue publication of the Faculty of Law of the National University of Singapore. This completes the process which began with the first scholarly documentation of Singapore's international law practice in 1977.
