Property and Contractual Issues Concerning Cryptoasset Exchanges

Allen Sng, Sheridan Fellow, NUS Law

Webinar

Friday, 26 June 2020 • 4.30pm to 6.00pm (SGT)

ABOUT THE SEMINAR

Since the launch of Bitcoin in 2008, cryptoassets have gained popularity with retail investors and banks. Exchanges have been set up to facilitate the trading of cryptoassets, such as Bitcoin and Ethereum. However, the structure of each exchange may differ, depending on the services which the exchange provides. Some exchanges hold cryptoassets on trust for the traders trading on their platforms while others do not. The terms of the service agreements may vary widely between different exchanges. How do property and contract law characterise these arrangements? What are the rights and remedies of the exchange participants? Two recent judgments handed down by the courts in Singapore and New Zealand demonstrate the difficulties in understanding how cryptoassets and the exchanges they are traded on, operate. In Quoine Pte Ltd v B2C2 Ltd ("Quoine") [2020] SGCA(I) 02, the Singapore Court of Appeal clarified how the doctrine of unilateral mistake applies in the context of algorithmic trading, and made important observations on how the doctrine may develop going forward. In Ruscoe v Cryptopia LTD (In Liquidation) ("Cryptopia") [2020] NZHC 728, the High Court of New Zealand held that cryptoassets are objects of property which can be held on trust. This seminar explores the wider implications of these decisions for property and contract law, and considers how the principles laid down in Quoine and Cryptopia may influence future cryptoasset-related disputes.

ABOUT THE CENTRE FOR BANKING & FINANCE LAW

The Centre for Banking & Finance Law (CBFL) at the Faculty of Law, National University of Singapore, seeks to generate scholarship and promote thinking about the vibrancy, robustness and soundness of the banking sector, capital markets and other financial services. Through the research our scholars undertake and the events we organise, we seek to create and share knowledge, to engage stakeholders in an exchange of ideas, and to enhance the appreciation of legal and regulatory issues. We aim to bring greater theoretical and analytical clarity to these issues, to examine their policy impact, and to be a catalyst for ideas on how to improve banking and financial systems at the national, regional and global levels.
