

Dear Asian Law Junior Scholars,

We are delighted to report that we have received over 300 submissions in response to our call for abstracts below.

The quality and creativity of the submissions exceeded our highest expectations. It was wonderful to see that there are exceptionally talented junior Asian law scholars in every part of Asia and around the world. Given the quality of the submissions, it is an arduous task to select only 35 junior scholars to be invited to submit full papers. As we anticipate that all those who will be selected will produce exceptional working papers, we have decided to create a webpage to profile those selected junior scholars and their working papers. We are confident that this body of scholarship will provide the best of what Asian law has to offer.

We suspect that it will be even more difficult to ultimately select the 8 to 12 papers for presentation at the Asian Law Junior Faculty Workshop. However, we are extremely grateful for the exceptional response and inspired by what the next generation of Asian law scholars has to offer

To all of those who submitted abstracts, we sincerely thank you. You will be receiving our decision on your submission within the next few days.

Best,

ALJFW Executive Committee
