

BOOK LAUNCH

Corporate Ordering: How Corporations Navigate Social Conflict

Date: Wednesday, 16 December 2026 | Time: 5PM - 6PM | Venue: Wee Chong Jin Moot Court, NUS Law

Synopsis

Corporations are writing the governance rules on AI, sustainability and gig economy labor before legislatures act. The book examines how firms build internal codes, how they exercise discretionary power across competing stakeholder interests, and how they implement self-monitoring systems, and it traces the way all of this is reshaping the boundary between law and corporate operations. The argument is built on case studies drawn from conversations with the people who designed these structures, and the closing chapters propose folding a deliberative standard into directors' duty of care.

Speaker & Author

Professor Stavros Gadinis

George R. Johnson Professor of Law
University of California, Berkeley

Stavros Gadinis is the George R. Johnson Professor of Law and Faculty Co-Director of the Berkeley Center for Law and Business at UC Berkeley School of Law. He teaches Business Associations and corporate law, and his research focuses on corporate governance as a site of social norm formation, at the intersection of law, institutional design and public policy. His work draws on practitioner interviews alongside doctrinal analysis of Delaware corporate law, with case studies spanning ridesharing platforms, climate governance and artificial intelligence.
