CYBER-CURRENCIES AS PROPERTY

By David Fox,

Lee Sheridan Conference Room, Eu Tong Sen Building
Faculty of Law, NUS (Bukit Timah Campus)

ABOUT THIS EVENT

Since the launch of bitcoin ten years ago, cyber-currencies have become a familiar investment and payment medium. Difficult legal questions still hang over their place in private law and whether established principles of property law can accommodate them at all. Can they be owned? What does it mean to say that they are transferred? What would it mean to trace them through a mixture?

This paper develops the view that common law concepts of property are indeed flexible enough to accommodate the rise of cyber-currencies. With some careful adaptation, standard property law rules can apply to them so that they do not in fact fall into a legal void.

ABOUT THE CENTRE FOR BANKING & FINANCE LAW

The Centre for Banking & Finance Law (CBFL) at the Faculty of Law, National University of Singapore, seeks to generate scholarship and promote thinking about the vibrancy, robustness and soundness of the banking sector, capital markets and other financial services. Through the research our scholars undertake and the events we organise, we seek to create and share knowledge, to engage stakeholders in an exchange of ideas, and to enhance the appreciation of legal and regulatory issues. We aim to bring greater theoretical and analytical clarity to these issues, to examine their policy impact, and to be a catalyst for ideas on how to improve banking and financial systems at the national, regional and global levels.
