ABSTRACT
This lecture focuses on a fourth branch of government, consisting of a group of institutions whose function, as described in the Constitution of South Africa, is the protection of constitutional democracy. Among these institutions are electoral commissions, anti-corruption agencies, and constitutional courts. As a shorthand, I call these institutions IPDs. The lecture begins by describing how the fourth branch fits into the overall scheme of separation of powers. By contrasting institutions for protecting democracy with the administrative bureaucracy, it then analyzes the branch’s emergence as a separate branch of government. What institutions are plausible candidates for inclusion in the fourth branch? Are central banks and environmental protection agencies such candidates? The lecture then describes the characteristics of the institutions within the fourth branch, focusing on questions of institutional design such as specialization, qualifications for appointment, appointment mechanisms, and tenure, and concludes with some speculations about the future of the fourth branch.

SPEAKER
Mark Tushnet is William Nelson Cromwell Professor of Law at Harvard Law School. He received his undergraduate degree magna cum laude from Harvard College in 1967 and a J.D. and M.A. in history from Yale University in 1971. He clerked for Judge George Edwards and Justice Thurgood Marshall before beginning to teach at the University of Wisconsin Law School in 1973. In 1981, he moved to the Georgetown University Law Center and in 2006 to Harvard Law School. He has been a visiting professor at the University of Texas, University of Southern California, University of Chicago, Columbia University, New York University, and Harvard law schools.

Professor Tushnet is the co-author of four casebooks, including the most widely used casebook on constitutional law, Constitutional Law (with Stone, Seidman, and Sunstein). He has written more than a dozen books, including a two-volume work on the life of Justice Thurgood Marshall, A Court Divided: The Rehnquist Court and the Future of Constitutional Law, Weak Courts, Strong Rights: Judicial Review and Social Welfare Rights in Comparative Constitutional Law, and Why the Constitution Matters, and edited eight others. He has received fellowships from the Rockefeller Humanities Program, the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars, and the John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation, and has written numerous articles on constitutional law and legal history. He was President of the Association of American Law Schools in 2003. In 2002, he was elected a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

Please register at https://mysurvey.nus.edu.sg/EFM/se/543BE5C27F6E342C
Closing Date for Registration: 14 September 2018 (Friday)
For enquiries, please contact Ms Poova at 6516 3644 or clemail@nus.edu.sg

Participants who wish to obtain CPD Points are reminded that they must comply strictly with the Attendance Policy set out in the CPD Guidelines. For this activity, this includes signing in on arrival and signing out at the conclusion of the activity in the manner required by the organiser, and not being absent from the entire activity for more than 15 minutes. Participants who do not comply with the Attendance Policy will not be able to obtain CPD Points for attending the activity. Please refer to http://www.sileCPDcentre.sg for more information.