Chairperson: Associate Professor Umakanth Varottil, NUS Law

TUESDAY 22 AUGUST 2023

5.30 PM - 7.00 PM

NUS LAW (BUKIT TIMAH CAMPUS), WEE CHONG JIN MOOT COURT

SYNOPSIS

Artificial intelligence (AI) and other emerging technologies are increasingly influencing the business models and structures of corporations. This lecture will focus on what these changes mean for selected aspects of corporate theory, governance, and regulation.

It will first engage with intra-corporate effects of technology and whether AI may take over corporate management. The lecture will then turn to impacts on external relationships between corporations, markets, and individuals.

Technology contributes to a world where corporate boundaries are increasingly blurred. This poses a challenge to traditional models for conceptualizing 'firms' and leads to several practical implications for governing and regulating business in technology-dominated environments, including policy-making for AI and online platforms.
